

Dr. Shen Hongxun

Dr. Shen Hongxun (°Shanghai 1939) is trained in Western and traditional Chinese medicine. He was Technical Director at a Hospital in Xinjiang and after the cultural revolution became the head of a pharmaceutical laboratory, where he directed research into the medicinal use of Chinese herbs. He is honorary director of the Qigong Science Society of China.

Dr. Shen incorporated into his medical knowledge the special internal forces he has developed since boyhood. He has been practising for over 50 years and learnt these techniques with renowned taijiquan masters, and Buddhist and Taoist monks. His research into the effects the application of these internal energy forces has on different health conditions, led to the development of the Buqi Health and Treatment System. In 1987, the universities of Ghent and Venice both invited Dr. Shen to supervise Ph.D. students. Later he founded Buqi Institute Belgium and Shen Hongxun College in London. He has since been teaching in Europe and the USA.

SPIRIT DISORDERS

For a long time medicine has ignored the phenomenon of certain diseases and disorders being caused by spirits or entities other than self. Hysteria, for example, and numerous other cases of so-called mental or psychiatric diseases are linked to spirit phenomena. It is not uncommon that the self-spirit temporarily exits from the body, for example during a coma or severe trauma. When the self-spirit is absent from the host body, it can present an opportunity to other spirit entities, that are themselves in the vicinity of the person, to invade. Once inside a person they can cause a range of problems that manifest as physical, emotional and mental disturbances or even diseases. It does not always take a state of deep physical unconsciousness for another spirit or entity to approach and to cause trouble. Spirits are around us at all times, and mostly this is not a problem. However, some are mischievous and even malevolent.

When the mental and spiritual constitution of a person is weakened by illness, alcohol, drugs (including certain types of medication) or some kinds of consciousness altering practice such as trance work or meditation, he can become the victim of a spirit attack. These attacks can be in the form of sudden surges of negative emotion (depression, anger, aggression etc.), physical dis-ease and illness or even accidents. Spirits and entities (they can be of human or animal origin) can form a parasitic attachment to a person, usually for the gratification of bodily sensations.

We have seen cases of sexual abuse of women and men by spirits; people driven to alcohol or drug abuse in order to, unbeknown to themselves, satisfy the urges of another. Some entities enter a human body and take control over a person's actions and behaviour. Spirit attachment and possession cause psychological and physical problems that can mimic or develop into serious disease. This poses great difficulties, not only for those who are directly influenced but for their social contacts and society as a whole.

Many in our modern society have lost touch with their own spiritual nature and often are completely unaware of their own spirit-essence. The number of undesirable spirit phenomena and related diseases will continue to grow and become more significant. It is, therefore, most important to gain a deeper understanding in order to recognise the signs, protect oneself and also become able to efficiently help and treat those affected. In this seminar Dr. Shen Hongxun will give safe and practical tuition regarding the different types of problems and disorders linked to spirit involvement and how to address them with Buqi treatment.
